PASTOR RESIGNS AT LOCAL CHURCH

Rev. Dr. Joseph B. Baker Accepts Call at Indiana, Pennsylvania.

WILL LEAVE AUGUST 15

Resignation Accepted by Church Council With Regrets. Was Pastor Here Thirteen Years.

After thirteen years of service as pastor of St. James Lutheran church, York street, the Rev. Dr. Joseph B. Baker, Sunday, tendered his resignation to the church council which held a short session following the morning worship. The resignation, which becomes effective August 15, was accepted by the councilmen with regret. The Rev. Mr. Baker has accepted a call from Zion Lutheran church at Indiana, this state.

The Rev. Mr. Baker succeeded the Rev. Dr. J. A. Clutz, Broadway, as pastor of St. James Lutheran in 1909. He was called here after completing a three year pastorate at St. Paul's Lutheran church at Newport, this state.

During his term as pastor of St. James Lutheran church, the Rev. Mr. Baker has been an active worker not only for his church and congregation but also for Gettysburg College in whose interests he gave much service.

In addition to increasing the membership of both the church and Sunday school by several hundred, it was during his pastorate that the modern church building and parsonage were erected. Work on the new edifice was begun in 1911 and completed early the following year. At the same time the present parsonage adjoining the church was built. The estimated cost of both church and parsonage were $60,000. The entire debt was wiped out several years ago.

Not only an able and forceful speaker, Rev. Mr. Baker is also a writer of no mean ability, and was a regular contributor to many Lutheran church magazines and periodicals. He was founder and editor of the Messenger, a monthly pamphlet, published by the church.

Among his most notable writing since he became pastor of St. James was the compilation of a complete history of the local congregation from 1775 down to the present time and a book of verse which he had published last Christmas and distributed among the members of his congregation.

Mr. Baker was an indefatigable worker for Gettysburg College and Seminary. When the Chicago firm, which laid foundation for the million dollar endowment fund for Gettysburg College, failed with only about half of the money pledged in 1920 and the drive gave evidences of dying a natural death, the Rev. Mr. Baker stepped

WOMAN KILLED IN ACCIDENT

Wife of The Rev. Ferdinand Hesse Escaped Uninjured.

Miss Grace Hauer, of Foxville, was instantly killed, and Mrs. Ferdinand Hesse, wife of the Lutheran pastor at Smithburg, the second occupant of the automobile, saved her life by jumping from the machine a second before the car was struck by a Western Maryland train at the Deerfield crossing at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Hesse is the wife of the Rev. Ferdinand Hesse, a graduate of the College here in the class of 1892.

The accident is said to have happened when Miss Hauer, who was driving the car, stalled the engine on the railroad track in front of the rapidly approaching Fast Mail train. Mrs. Hesse jumped from the machine just before the crash came, and escaped unharmed. The automobile with Miss Hauer was dragged a distance of 100 feet before the train was brought to a stop.

MEN HAVE NARROW ESCAPE IN CRASH

Light Coupe Was Struck at Seven Stars by Huge Freight Engine.

ONE MAN HAS BROKEN LEG

K. Goldberg, Owner And Driver of Car, Gives Pitiful Story to Secure Release From Hospital.

G. W. Biting, aged 18 years, of Marysville, this state, and K. Goldberg, aged 36, of Dayton, Ohio, had a miraculous escape from death at 3:30 o'clock Sunday morning, near Seven Stars, when the light coupe in which they were riding was struck by a Western Maryland freight engine and carried 600 feet west of the Lincoln Highway, where the accident occurred.

As a result Biting is in the Warner Hospital suffering a broken right leg. Goldberg sustained lacerations of the face and arms, but left the Warner Hospital Sunday evening for Philadelphia.

Goldberg, the owner and driver of the light car, was on his way from Dayton, Ohio, to Philadelphia, he said, and offered Biting a "lift" along the Lincoln Highway west of Connelville. Unaware of the railroad crossing at Seven Stars, Goldberg failed to see the approaching freight train in time to prevent the accident.

The huge engine struck the light automobile with great force and carried it 200 yards west of the highway, before the train could be brought to a stop.

Enginemen lifted the two men from the wreckage of the machine and a local garage was notified. Goldberg and Biting were conscious when taken from the debris.

At the hospital, Sunday morning, Goldberg, in order to secure his release, gave Miss Elizabeth Thomas, the superintendent, a pitiful story. He told her that he was on his way to Philadelphia to meet his wife and five children, who had arrived last week from Russia, and who he had not seen for 14 years. Goldberg, a native Russian, stated that he came to this country to make his fortune, leaving his wife and children behind. Since coming to this country he had amassed a small fortune, he said, and sent funds to his wife and children to come to America.

The story secured his release and late Sunday afternoon, he was taken to Philadelphia in company with an attendant nurse. Enroute to Philadelphia, Goldberg told the nurse, who accompanied him, that he told the story of meeting his wife merely to secure his release from the local institution. To prove his statement, he showed the nurse a divorce decree from a wife handed down by an Ohio judge six weeks ago.

MINISTER NOT A CANDIDATE

The Rev. Charles W. Baker Accepts Charge Near Pittsburgh.

The Rev. Charles W. Baker, who was to preach his trial sermon to the Lutheran congregation of Salem church, of Wolf's charge Sunday, accepted a call to a church, near Pittsburgh, early last week and did not preach there. Last Sunday he preached at Wolf's church. At a congregational meeting of Salem church, to be held July 30, a pastor will be elected. The same pastor will be called by the congregation at Wolf's church, at a congregational meeting to be held on August 6.

RE-DECORATING HOUSE

Residence Will Be Used As Academy Dormitory.

Work of painting and papering the interior of the residence of Mrs. Emory Bair, Carlisle street, which has been leased by Gettysburg Academy, is progressing. The building will be used in the fall as a dormitory by the school. Twenty boys will be quartered there. Indications are now that the enrollment will be the largest in the history of the institution this year. Dormitory space for 100 boys is now provided.

DOUBLE WEDDING EVENT OBSERVED

Two Families Join in Celebrating Thirty-Second Anniversary of Marriage.

Double weddings occur frequently, but rarely do the contracting parties celebrate the anniversary of the event together thirty-two years afterward. This, however, was the case last Saturday when Mr. and Mrs. John W. Bollinger and Mr. and Mrs. John E. McDonnell, with their families, observed the anniversary of their double ceremony 32 years ago. The celebration took the form of a picnic at the Masonic camping grounds, along the Monocacy river. Twenty seven of the 31 members of both families were present.

Thirty-two years ago today John W. Bollinger married Miss Lillie Keifer and Miss Mary Richter became the bride of John E. McDonnell. They were united in marriage in the Mt. Joy Church parsonage by Rev. Howard Heilman, pastor.

Those present at the picnic Saturday were:

Mr. and Mrs. John Bollinger and their children, Mrs. Buelah Reaver, Mrs. Mabel Null, Mrs. Mary Bricker, Sterling, Edith, Fred and Mildred Bollinger; their grandchildren, Eugene, Rufus and Lillie Reaver; Preston, Walter, Catherine, Richard and Edgar Null; Mr. and Mrs. John McDonnell and their children, Luther, Carroll R. and Henry McDonnell.

DRIVER AVOIDS ACCIDENT

Said to Have Been West Virginia Senator And Family.

To avoid being struck by a passenger train on the Western Maryland railroad, near Golden's station, Sunday evening, about 8:15 o'clock, the driver of a large sedan, driving east on the Lincoln Highway, with presence of mind quickly changed the course of the automobile and sent it down into a large gully along side the road. The three occupants of the machine were uninjured and the car was undamaged.

The driver apparently was unaware of the railroad crossing near Golden's station, but saw the train bearing down upon the car in time to throw the big machine off the road and into the gully.

A large crowd gathered and attempted to push the heavy car back onto the road but were unable to do so. A New Oxford garageman was summoned and with the aid of a derrick, pulled the machine back on the highway.

The machine bore a West Virginia license and contained a man, woman and child. Their names could not be learned, although it was rumored that the man was a United States Senator from West Virginia.

BREAKS LEG IN RUNAWAY

Animal, Belonging to Gettysburg Ice Company, Was Shot After Accident.

A runaway occurred on Stevens street this morning about 9:45 o'clock when the horses attached to the ice wagon of the Gettysburg Ice and Storage Company took fright at a passing automobile truck. In rounding the corner at Stevens and North Stratton streets, one of the animals fell, breaking its left front leg and later was shot.

James Shindeldecker and Peter Sease, drivers of the ice wagon, were standing nearby when the animals took fright, but were unable to stop them. The horses ran over a pavement and lawn at the corner of Stevens street and North Stratton street where one of them fell and was unable to rise. This checked the other horse and it stopped running shortly afterward.

Two wheels of the wagon were broken. Much of the load of ice was thrown into the street, when the horses bolted.

SIGN FOR CHAUTAUQUA

Residents of Biglerville and Arendtsville have signed contracts for the return of the community chautauqua next year. The chautauqua closed its engagement at Biglerville last Friday evening. It was generally understood by those signing the contracts that the chautauqua next summer would hold its sessions at Arendtsville.

BARN STRUCK IN STORM

According to report from Hammers' Hall at 3 o'clock this afternoon, the barn on the farm of M. L. Kepner, near that place, was struck by a bolt of lightning during the heavy electrical storm which passed over Adams county this afternoon. According to the report, the hay in the mow was set on fire, but a bucket brigade organized at once got the flames under control before much damage was done.

NO EFFORT MADE TO STOP BANDITS

No Assistance Offered Foust Distillery Guards From York or Neighboring County.

LIQUOR TAKEN OVER LINE

Now Thought Raid Was Made to Cover Previous Thefts. Doubt Ability to Move Barrels in Short Time.

Internal revenue officers have begun an investigation of the raid and liquor theft which occurred at the Foust distillery, near Glen Rock, late last Friday night and early Saturday morning. It was learned late Sunday night that these officers are actively engaged in trying to run down the rum-runners and to locate the large consignment of whiskey stolen from the bonded warehouse at the distillery. In addition to the internal revenue department officers, other officials of the federal prohibition enforcement forces are on the trail of the raiding party. No definite clue had been found up to Sunday night, however.

The raid, which began before midnight, Friday, netted the rum-runners 181 barrels of the total supply stored there. There now remains 135 barrels of whiskey in the warehouse. It has been estimated that the liquor is valued at $1,000 per barrel, which would place the valuation of the stolen supply at $181,000, but this is said to be far below the actual valuation based on present inflated prices. Conservatives place its value to bootleggers at $300,000 or more.

Nine trucks were said to have assisted over the hill at Wiley's Mill, Maryland, Saturday morning at 9 o'clock, where one of their number had become mired. Had an organized pursuit been launched, it is likely this entire fleet and the men who were in charge might have been captured.

The most deplorable part of the entire affair, as unsavory as it appears, is the fact that no effort whatever was made to halt or locate the raiders. No help was forthcoming from York or the country surrounding the distillery. The raiders, according to their own admission, are the same who attempted on one previous occasion to rob the distillery, but at that time they were foiled by the watchfulness of the guards.

According to Justice of the Peace Fulton, at Stewartstown, the trucks are the same ones which have been seen plying through the town for the past several weeks. Mr. Fulton has taken the license numbers of the trucks, but believes that they are only duplicate license plates and that the

AGED MAN STRUCK BY CAR

Lewis Groft, Edgegrove, Stepped Into Path of Machine.

Becoming confused by the approach of a traction engine and an automobile in opposite directions, Saturday evening about 6 o'clock, Lewis Groft, aged 63 years, of Edgegrove, near McSherrystown, was struck by the motor car and sustained a fractured skull. He was admitted to the Warner Hospital here about 8 o'clock the same evening and Sunday afternoon an operation was performed when part of the fractured structure of his skull was removed. Today his condition is reported as satisfactory.

The aged man had just left his home in Edgegrove and was in the act of crossing the street, when he noticed the approach of the traction engine and the automobile. The motorist blew his horn, it is said, but Mr. Groft was giving his attention to the traction engine, and stepped back into the path of the oncoming machine. He was thrown heavily against a brick wall near his home and rendered unconscious.

PETTY THEFTS ARE MADE AT PARK

Motorists Declare Articles of Apparel Are Taken From Unguarded Machines.

Petty thefts from cars parked at Caledonia Park, fifteen miles west of Gettysburg, along the Lincoln Highway, have been reported by a number of residents of Gettysburg. Among the articles reported stolen from unguarded cars at the park have been coats, automobile robes and motorometers. A number of pleasure-seekers of Gettysburg, who have had articles stolen from their cars, are aroused to indignation against the management of the park and threaten to boycott the resort.

The thieving has been going on for the past two summers, according to a local authority. A number of small boys in that vicinity are said to be the perpetrators. Local residents, who frequent the park, have protested to the management but no move has been made to stop the depredations, they declare. Several persons said they would be willing to pay a nominal sum to have their cars parked in safety at the resort, rather than be the victims of petty thefts.

A local taxi driver, who takes passengers to Caledonia several times a week, declares that he is compelled to remain in his car each evening for fear something will be stolen, should he walk away, and leave the car unguarded.

ANNUAL STATE TOUR

Fruit Men To Visit New Jersey Orchards.

Announcement was made here today at the Farm Bureau of the annual summer tour of the State Horticultural Association to be held August 2 and 3. For the last few years the association has visited orchards within the state, but this year the trip extends into New Jersey.

Some of the largest fruit and truck farms in New Jersey will be visited during the two days. A. F. Mason, extension horticulturist of New Jersey, will act as guide. One of the features of the tour will be an inspection of the damage done by the Japanese beetle.

FLOOD IN CHICOPEE

Two Dams Empty Their Waters Into Streets of Town.

(By Associated Press) Chicopee, Mass., July 17.—Twenty million gallons of water flooded a portion of the Williamsett district here today when Langwell's dam and another dam at Robert's Pond gave way. Residences and places of business along Chicopee's streets were flooded above the first floors and occupants were forced to flee to second and third floors for safety. No lives were lost.

Property loss from the flood will be heavy. A score or more of dwellings were swept off their foundations and deposited some distance away, while others were tilted askew on their foundations.

OIL CONTINUES TO FLOW FREELY

No Signs of Let-Up in Wells of Rediscovered Pool at Tidoute, Warren County.

HAD BEEN DEAD 25 YEARS

Recent Survey by State Geologist Shows That All Wells Are Gushers Coming From Sand Below Surface.

Some months ago certain sections of Adams county were greatly stirred by the reported finding of oil, considerable money was expended in investigations, but so far the results have been far from satisfactory. In the meantime, the great Tidoute oil pool in Warren county was rediscovered and since, a flood of oil has been pouring to the surface which shows little signs of let-up. This new find is especially interesting, as it is located in a former famous oil field, but that section was considered practically "dry" for the past twenty-five years.

Suddenly one day several months ago, an oil gusher was produced on the Siggins Farm by Charles Carnahan, and this well showed the Queen sand, found deep below the surface of the earth, to be productive. A recent inspection made of that field by M. E. Johnson, oil and gas geologist in the Bureau of Topographic and Geological Survey of the Pennsylvania Department of Internal Affairs, shows that the oil pool is continuing to pour forth a flood of oil with little signs of a let-up at this time.

The so-called Queen sand, from which the oil is being obtained is not a new sand but is the one that yields gas in an old pool about two or three miles east. There, the sand is almost 100 feet thick and the top of it is found at a depth of about 700

SPROUL AT CONFERENCE

Governor And Senator Confer With President on Strike Situation.

(By Associated Press) Washington, July 17.—A "specific" program destined to bring an end to the coal and railroad strikes was discussed today at the White House conference between President Harding, Governor Sproul, of Pennsylvania, Senator George Wharton Pepper and Attorney General Alter. No announcement was forthcoming as to the nature of the proposal considered by the President.

On leaving the White House Governor Sproul stated "Pennsylvania is pledged to the immediate and continuous support of the government, I am ready," the Governor stated, "to set in motion at an instant's notice all organized forces of the Commonwealth to effectuate such measures as the President of the United States may determine upon, as all must recognize that a national emergency exists."

Mr. Alter accompanied the Governor to Washington so that he might hold a conference with Attorney General Daugherty "so that a program might be worked out by which state and National forces could co-operate."

On response to inquiries, it was said that the suggested mine seizure by the government was not discussed at the conference. It was said that the coal and railroad strikes were so closely intertwined as to the effect accomplished in the country, that both were considered. The impression prevailed that new steps on some measure to deal with the coal situation would be taken by the Administration in the next 24 hours.

MORE MEN ON STRIKE

(By Associated Press) Cleveland, O., July 17.—Approximately 125 members of the American Federation of Railroad workers, employed on the New York Central lines went on strike today against a wage reduction. About 150 members of the stationary engineers, firemen and oilers unions struck here at 10 o'clock this morning, according to union agents.

NINE MEN KILLED IN MINE ATTACK

Between Three and Four Hundred Men in Attacking Party.

MANY WERE WOUNDED

Tipple Above Mine Blown Up With Charge of Dynamite. State Police And Governor Notified.

(By Associated Press) Wellsburg, W. Va., July 17.—Sheriff H. H. Duvall and 8 men are known to have been killed and large number wounded in a fight at the Cliftonville mines of the Richland Coal company, ten miles from Wellsburg, near the Pennsylvania state line today. The dead were brought here and the wounded taken to Wheeling hospitals.

T. H. Duvall, who was with his father at the mines when the fight took place, accompanied the body of his father to their home here. "There had been rumors for some time that the mine was to be attacked. It had been operating non-union," said Mr. Duvall, "and last night we heard the attack was to be made soon. The sheriff had a detail of men at the mine, but he gathered up a number of others here in Wellsburg and we went out to the mine last night. The report was that a big force of men were on their way over the state line in Pennsylvania and after we reached the mine, the sheriff placed guards around the property."

LOOK FOR MORE BODIES

(By Associated Press) Wellsburg, July 17.—Deputy sheriffs and State policemen were searching the wooded hills around the mines this afternoon, ten miles from here for bodies of men believed to have been killed in the attack on the mine.

Sheriff H. H. Duvall and six unidentified dead were brought to Wellsburg but officers believe that others lost their lives in the fighting. Fire ignited by the attackers was extinguished after the mine tippie had been burned to the mouth of the mine. Thomas H. Duvall, who was with his father when he was shot, was this afternoon elected sheriff by the court and he at once took charge with the assistance of Sheriff Clouse and a body of State policemen.

FORCE AMBULANCES BACK

(By Associated Press) Steubenville, O., July 17.—Automobiles carrying newspaper men and ambulances carrying nurses proceeding from Wellsburg to Follinsburg, West Virginia, to the Richland mines, were turned back by bullets at 8.45 this morning, according to word received here. Firing was still going on at 10 o'clock, according to reports. Four deputies, all seriously injured, have been taken to Wellsburg. At 10 o'clock an ambulance loaded with nurses departed from Wellsburg to try to force their way to the mine to bring in the wounded and the bodies of the dead.

STOCK REPORT

(By Associated Press) New York, July 17.—Some early selling originated from interior sources but commission houses reported little outside interest in the stock market this morning. Oils continued to be offered on further cuts in the crude product at eastern and southwestern centers. Gains of 1 to 2 points were made by some of the steels and equipments, however. Rails were more irregular. Call money opened at 3 per cent. The closing was irregular. Sales approximated 475,000 shares.

POSSIBLE END OF STRIKE IS SEEN

Both Sides Freely Express Hopes of Settlement of Railroad Strike.

TRUCE NOW PREVAILS

Strict Silence is Maintained by Leading Railway Officials and Strike Leaders.

Chicago, July 17.—A veil of silence descended like a blanket over the railway strike situation yesterday as both railroad heads and strike leaders turned hopeful eyes toward the momentous developments the new week was expected to bring forth.

The bitterness which has marked the progress of the walkout at times during the past two weeks seemed to have been succeeded by a peace almost approaching an understanding. The hurrying of verbal challenges, claims and counter-claims, ultimatums and defiance apparently had ended through exhaustion or the hope of an early agreement.

Railway executives who declared their willingness Saturday night to attend any meeting called by the United States Railroad Board with a view to effecting a settlement "that would not nullify but would uphold and carry out the Board's decisions," spent the holiday away from their offices and in seclusion.

B. M. Jewell, leader of the striking shopmen, visited his almost deserted headquarters for a short time only to run through his mail and telegrams. He read the railroad executives' statement with a quiet grip, but refused to comment on it. "There will be nothing over the weekend," he said.

"I can't say a word, son—not a word," Ben Hooper, chairman of the Labor Board, sighed wearily, throwing his arms across the shoulder of the reporter, who had found him alone in the offices of the Board.

Signs of Hope
Despite the silence of the leaders, with accompanying rumors of a tacit armistice of truce to allow fuller consideration of points brought out during the week at mediation conferences, hopes of an early settlement were expressed freely in both railway and labor quarters, although no tangible basis for these expectations was given in any case.

One of the factors most often quoted to justify a belief that the drift was toward peace, despite the failure last week of Mr. Hoover's efforts to bring the labor leaders and the executives together, was the statement of R. A. Henning, general chairman of the Federated Shops Crafts of the Northwest, that only the refusal of Eastern roads to agree to reinstate striking shop crafts workers with their full seniority rights is preventing a settlement of the strike, so far as the Northwestern roads are concerned.

The railroads throughout, it was declared, have insisted that their men return to work as one of the first steps toward peace, and the belief was expressed that the restoration of the rights sought would not alone prove a great stumbling block in the way of a full settlement. In this connection a member of the Labor Board asserted that the roads had to a large extent stopped recruiting men to replace the strikers.

Two Questions Unsettled

On the other questions at issue—outside contracting for shop work, modification of certain rules and working agreements, the establishment of conciliation boards and wages—it was declared that most of the roads had already agreed to abolishing outside contracting as ordered by the Labor Board, and to establish early the conciliation boards under the Federal Transportation Act. Thus, but two questions, it was asserted, were now at issue—rules and wages—both of which might again be brought before the Labor Board for decision on the demand of the men for a rehearing. In the case of the Maintenance of Way men, it was pointed out, the Board averted a walkout by agreeing to an immediate consideration of appeals for wage increases on the ground that Government figures showed that the cost of living had increased since it rendered the wage reduction decision, which became effective on July 1, simultaneously with the calling of the shopmen's strike.

DEMAND FOR ALIEN PATENTS REFUSED

Head of Chemical Foundation Tells President He is Grossly Misled by Attorney General.

New York, July 17.—The Chemical Foundation, Inc., has declined to comply with the request of Alien Property Custodian Thomas W. Miller, that it return to the Government the patents, trade marks and copyrights assigned to the company, a letter written by Francis P. Garvan, president of the Foundation, made public yesterday, discloses.

Another letter from Mr. Garvan, to President Harding, avers that the information given the President about the case "has been furnished by German agents to an ex-German spy and interpreted by lawyers whose sole knowledge of the war and its lessons is derived by association with German clients." The President is urged by Mr. Garvan to seek "other counsel," the letter declaring that he has been "grossly misled by the Attorney General both as to the law and the facts of the case."

Denies Government's Right

In his letter to Alien Property Custodian Miller Mr. Garvan states: "This will acknowledge receipt of your communication dated the 8th day of July, 1922, demanding that this company return and deliver to you all patents, trade-marks and copyrights heretofore assigned to this company by the Alien Property Custodian; that the company account to you for all income received by it from such patents, trade-marks and copyrights, and that the company forthwith cease to exercise any dominion over such trade-marks, copyrights and patents."

"In reply thereto you are advised that this company is owner, in its own right, of all the aforesaid patents, trademarks and copyrights and of the income derived therefrom. The company denies that the United States Government, or you, as Alien Property Custodian, or anyone other than this company has any right, title of interest in said patents, trademarks and copyrights. The company, therefore, declines to comply with your demand in any particular whatsoever."

Rebukes The President

After reviewing in the letter to President Harding what he states were the steps which led to the sale of the patents, trademarks and copyrights of the Foundation, including numerous quotations from former acting Secretary of State Polk and one from former President Wilson, Mr. Garvan says:

"It is the first time in the history of the United States Government that the Chief Executive has been advised by his Attorney General to attempt to abrogate the solemn executive order of his predecessor. It is the first time in the history of the United States that the Chief Executive has been advised by his Attorney General to violate a sacred contract entered into by the Government with its citizens."

NO EFFORT MADE TO STOP BANDITS

raiders did not use their original licenses.

The liquor was difficult to secure, as it was stored on the second and fourth floors of the distillery. To some, it is regarded as a physical impossibility to remove 181 filled barrels of whiskey in three hours time. The facilities of the elevator in the warehouse are limited to about four barrel capacity at one hauling. For the raiders to lift the filled barrels from the racks, roll them to the elevator and convey them to the first floor, thence to the front platform to the trucks, is regarded in the light of bordering on the miraculous. Although nothing definite could be learned, it is freely being said, without confirmation, however, that the theft was staged to cover previous thefts at the distillery. This is emphatically denied by guards and John Foust, owner of the distillery.

The liquor is not the property of Mr. Foust, but is held for men who hold certificates in bond for the whiskey. It was learned Sunday night that of the total supply Abe Trattner, York, held certificates for 147 barrels. Officers at Hagerstown are convinced that a portion of the 181 barrels of whiskey stolen from the Foust distillery at Glen Rock, was brought to that city.

Prohibition agents following the trail of the stolen whiskey traced some of it to Hagerstown, it is said, and they expect to be able to locate it there. Sheriff Kline and the Hagerstown police force are aiding the "dry" agents.

At the State line, it is believed, the trucks divided and went in different directions, some to Baltimore and others to Hagerstown and elsewhere.

TROOPS PROTECT MINES IF OPENED

Production Can be Boosted With Non-Union Men, Operators Claim.

CABINET MEETING HELD

Seizure Seen as Only Alternative But President Still Entertains Hope That Step Will Not be Necessary.

Washington, July 17.—President Harding and members of his Cabinet held a council of war yesterday to determine what steps the Administration shall take to meet the coal and rail strikes.

The Administration plan for peace was given a severe setback Saturday when the policy committee of the United Mine Workers of America rejected Harding's proposal for putting the 600,000 striking miners back to work pending arbitration.

Government seizure of the coal mines appeared yesterday to be the only solution to the problems of staving off a fuel famine this fall and winter.

Faint hope is held out by the Administration that this step will not be necessary. This hope is pinned on the assumption that the operators will accept the Harding plan and evolve some means of stimulating coal production.

Anthracite operators several days ago agreed to conditional acceptance of the proposal.

The bituminous operators met and discussed the situation. It is said the Government will suggest that they present plans for the resumption of coal production.

One high official expressed the belief that the operators are in a position to secure sufficient non-union labor to boost production by 2,000,000 or 3,000,000 tons weekly. The Government, this official stated, would bind itself to protect the strikebreakers with troops.

In some Administration quarters the impression is that the miners are pursuing a deliberate policy of opposing the Administration proposals for peace for the purpose of forcing Federal seizure of the mines. The miners insist that if the Government could examine the books of the operators a startling story of abnormal profits, gouging of the coal consumers and the miners would be uncovered. Federal seizure would mean public access to the books, the miners believe.

Officials in Washington are inclined to let the Railroad Labor Board carry the burden of negotiating a settlement of the railway strike. Harding reiterated that the board is the authorized agency of the Government in the transportation field and as such is empowered to act in making peace.

Administration officials are concerned solely with seeing that the mails and interstate commerce are not interrupted.

feet below the top of the Third sand.

It is not believed that the newly discovered pool will be a large one. There is little evidence of an anticline or even a pronounced roll in the structure. The dip at every outcrop, seen by the oil and gas geologist, was flat or very slight to the south. Probably the texture of the oil reservoir, it was stated, will have more to do with the extent of the pool than will the structure. Dry holes have already outlined the extent of the pool in certain directions.

All of the wells brought in to date are gushers, flowing naturally at intervals when the accumulated pressure of the gas in the wells becomes sufficient to raise the column of oil in the hole. The oil is light colored, greenish-yellow, and very similar to a light-bodied lubricating oil in appearance. The gravity is 47.7 degrees Beaume.

At the newly opened pool south of Tidoute, pay sand was not found until some 60 feet of "shells" had been passed through, the exact depth to the pay sand in the Clinger well being 767 feet from the top of the Third (Venango group) sand or 1100 feet from the surface. The sixty feet of "shells" is believed to represent the top of the thick sandstone which occurs further east and it was this great thickness of "shells," or rather the rapid thinning of the Queen sand in a westerly direction, that was the cause of the present pool remaining undiscovered for so long. After drilling to a depth of some 730 or 740 feet below the top of the Third sand, drillers took it for granted that the Queen sand must have pinched out entirely and so ceased drilling when they were within a few feet of the top of the "pay streak" from which the present big production is being obtained.

EMPLOYMENT IDEA USED ACROSS SEA

Plan of American Legion Adopted by Polish Government.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 17.—The success of the American Legion's employment campaign for former service men has received recognition of the Polish Government, which is being guided now in preventing unemployment by the ideas of the Americans.

A letter of thanks has been received at national headquarters of the Legion from T. Hoinko, commercial department manager of the Consulate General, Chicago.

More than 500,000 today are in permanent employment as one result of the drive in the United States, it was stated. The results of the first week showed that more than 40,000 former service men were employed in some way or other. Today in many parts of the country there are demands made upon the American Legion for workers.

Steps Outlined To Poland

The steps taken in the Legion campaign, as outlined to the Polish Republic, were summarized as follows:

"First a national census was taken to ascertain how many former service men were out of employment."

"Then the aid of all national organizations of a civic, patriotic, commercial and religious nature was solicited."

"The situation was brought before the public through the assistance of newspapers and magazines."

Started With Employment Day

"A campaign was adopted to start the campaign, March 21, 1922, called the American Legion Employment Day. Proclamations were issued by Federal, State and municipal officials, whose co-operation was solicited through the various agencies."

"A united drive, through publicity, was begun. Everyone was urged to provide work, at least of a temporary nature, by painting up and cleaning up."

"The results of the campaign were constantly kept before the public, and where one community fell down special effort was made from the national headquarters to help it out: The snowball started rolling, grew into an avalanche and the period of depression passed."

PROVES GERMANY BEGAN IT

Monument to First French Soldier Killed in War Unveiled.

Paris, July 17.—A monument to the first soldier killed in the world war was unveiled yesterday by Premier Poincare at Joncherey, near Belfort, Alsace. The soldier was Corporal Jules Peugeot. He was 21 years old and in charge of a squad stationed six miles from the German frontier.

Peugeot was killed by Lieutenant Mayer, commanding the advancing German troops, on August 2, 1914, 30 hours before the war with Germany was declared.

Referring to this incident as "the prologue to the great drama," M. Poincare declared that those who might be asked to hear the German claim that the Germans did not commence the war could not secure listeners in this region, where Germany's first aggressions had taken place.

The Premier went into detail with regard to the French Government's orders to army headquarters, in which the Minister of War, in the name of the President of the republic, insisted that for diplomatic reasons no troops should cross the German frontier or commit any act of war, but that they should remain ten kilometres inside French territory.

"France," declared M. Poincare, "always had been sincerely pacifist. The German Government refused all propositions to arbitrate and then declared war and invaded France before a declaration of war. This stone will recall the reality to doubters. Today the German Government is trying to escape the inescapable judgment, but it never will be able to do so."

BEEES STAY SOBER NOW

New York, July 17.—Bees and wasps have greatly benefited by prohibition, according to Professor Allen Latham, of Scotland road, Norwich Town, Connecticut, who owns an apiary of 400 hives. Before the Volstead act they left home to hang around the dumpings of distilleries, gin-mills and breweries, and got shamefully "loaded." Now they stay home and behave.

CAUGHT WHITE HOUSE RAT

A white rat, a species said to be rare in this section, was caught in a steel trap by Lloyd Decker, Hunters-town, at his home early Sunday morning. The rat, which is more than two-thirds grown, was seen on several occasions by residents, in Hunters-town, but eluded capture until caught in the steel trap by Mr. Decker.

DISCOVER GIGANTIC OAK

Huntingdon, Pa., July 17.—State Forester T. Roy Morton and Professor J. S. Ilick, while on a field trip Saturday discovered what they believe to be the largest oak tree in Pennsylvania. It is of the mossy cup or burr variety, 84 feet high and of 106-foot spread. At the ground it measures 39 feet 9 inches, a foot from the ground 29 feet and 4½ feet from the ground 20 feet 2 inches in circumference.

It is located in Shavers Creek Valley, Huntingdon county, on the farm of the late Samuel Gregory, of Mount Union. Foresters intend gathering acorns from this giant tree this fall to be planted on the State reserves.

We replied to the fire and the sheriff ordered the men to move up the hill. They responded, firing as they went. The sheriff reached the top before he was killed. I saw him a few minutes before and he was hurrying after a small party of the mob.

"The mob seemed to be armed with all kinds of guns and had abundant ammunition, because they kept shooting even after we had broken their line and they were running over the hill."

"Some of them got in behind us evidently, because they exploded a charge of dynamite under the tippie and it was blown up. I think it caught fire and burned to the ground. I don't know how many of the men who attacked us were killed. There were at least eight for I am sure I saw that many bodies. I know a lot of them were wounded."

"There must have been 300 or 400 in the mob while Sheriff Duxvall had no more than about 20 men with him. The tippie and the village of Cliftonville are in a hollow and the mine opening is on a hillside not far from the top. The mob was hidden in sor brushers near the top and opened fire on the tippie. As soon as the shooting began, we started right up the hill after them and from then until they had all been dispersed, everybody was shooting his best. So far as I know only one of our men was killed."

The news was late in reaching Wellsburg but as soon as word of the fight became known, a call was sent to Governor Morgan and General Jackson, of the state police, for help.

The town was thrown into a ferment of excitement but no immediate trouble was anticipated by the authorities, although it is the center of an important mining region.

Nine of the men supposed to have been striking miners, who attacked Cliftonville mine this morning, have been arrested and are in jail here, and three of the injured have been taken to a hospital in Wheeling, according to information received here.

For Once He Got All The Cake He Wanted

THE REV. J. B. BAKER, D. D.

into the harness and assisted materially in completing the effort. Mr. Baker had charge of the solicitation of funds for the endowment from churches in the West Pennsylvania synod, and gave his entire time to this work, his pulpit being filled by supply pastors.

While the Second Mile campaign was in progress, the Rev. Dr. Baker began the publication of the "Gettysburg Challenger," a monthly paper, giving data on the advancement of the drive and news of Gettysburg College. When the million dollar drive came to a successful end in June, Mr. Baker announced that he would continue publishing this paper.

The Rev. Mr. Baker was born at Littleton and received his early schooling in the public schools there. He later entered Franklin and Marshall Academy, Lancaster, and in the fall of 1896 entered Gettysburg College. Sickness at the end of his junior year compelled him to drop out of his class and he returned to finish his course with the class of 1901, graduating from Seminary three years later.

His first charge was St. Peter's Lutheran church, York, where he remained until 1906 when he left to become pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran church at Newport.

The degree of Doctor of Divinity was bestowed upon him by Gettysburg College in 1920.

He is a member of the Educational committee of the West Pennsylvania synod, a trustee of the Seminary here, and was a member of the General Synod in Richmond, Indiana, and Chicago, Illinois. He was a delegate to the merger meeting in New York City several years ago which resulted in the formation of the United Lutheran Church in America.

Mr. Baker was married to Miss Rena Lindner, of Amsterdam, New York, in 1904. They have four children: Clara Baker, Dorothea Baker, Joseph J. Baker, and Rena L. Baker.

PUBLIC PARK ALONG CONEWAGO

Owner Of Dicks' Woods To Provide Amusements.

Charles E. Miller, of McSherrystown, owner of the tract of woodland along the Conewago, known as Dicks' woods, extending from the bridge to the Country Club, is planning to turn that woods into a public park. He intends to apply to the state for a charter for a public park in the near future. If it is granted, he will place certain improvements upon the tract.

These improvements will include a large bath house and a boat livery. Swings and slides and other amusements will be provided for children. Benches and tables will also be erected and it is planned to turn the woods into an ideal picnic grounds. On the other hand, the public park charter will permit the owner of the woods to protect it against injury especially to the trees and game which are there.

The woods has long been used as a stopping place for persons who wish to spend a day along the creek and who have no cottage of their own to which to go. During the summer months the woods are crowded every Sunday. Sometimes several hundred people spend the day there. Naturally harm has been done to the woods in some instances. It is the owner's wish to provide a place where for a small return, the camper for a day may have the advantage of a well equipped park and on the other hand to insure himself against the intruder who may harm his property.

The improvements will probably not materialize until the opening of the next camping season.

ERECT MEMORIAL BUILDING

Dauphin County Masons Receive Bids For Elizabethtown Structure.

With the approval Friday night of building plans for the Dauphin County Memorial Building to be erected by the Masons of Dauphin county at Elizabethtown, contractor's bids are now being received for the work, which will be started the latter part of August, it was said.

Four architects submitted plans for the $70,000 building, which will be constructed of Holmesburg granite and be similar to the Daman Building located along the Boulevard. The plans of Edgar A. Wightman, an architect of Philadelphia, was selected by the committee which met with the representatives of the various lodges. Abraham W. Beitler, of Philadelphia, grand master of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, presided.

It was announced by Samuel D. Samsom, chairman of the memorial committee, that of the number of pledges out, $5,000 still remains to be paid. It is being planned to furnish the building with any sum that remains over the cost of building.

BOY DENIES CONFESSION

Claims He Did Not Drown Lad For $1.10.

Lancaster, July 17. — Charged with homicide, Samuel Barton Jacobs, 12 years old, of Terre Hill, who, according to the State Police, confessed to causing the death of his chum, Romanus Willet Swiegar, 12 years old, by drowning in the Conewago on July 1, was arrested.

Jacobs has changed his attitude on the drowning since making the confession, the State Police aver, and is now maintaining a stolid front, insisting that he told a false story to free himself of blame. According to the confession to the State Police, in the present of six Terre Hill residents, Jacobs declared he caused Swiegar to drop from a swinging vine because he refused to share his Fourth of July savings with him. Jacobs, said after the boy was drowned, he went back to the point and stole $1.10 and spent it for ice cream and fireworks.

WHITE GOODS

"I'll get that out of her or know the reason why. They've poisoned her against me, that's about how it is in a nutshell. I'll get that pointing to be in that dirty Harlem hole with her mother and grandmother out of her or know the reason why."

"Look, this is the front hall. Guess this ain't got that sty in Twenty-third street beat some. Look! How do you like it? This way to the parlor and dining room."

Sadie Barnett smiled through the shadows in her eyes. "Jerry! Say, ain't this beautiful! A upright piano and gold chairs and—Why, Jerry! why, Jerry!"

"And look in here, the dining room. Her and her mother shopped three weeks to get this oak set, and see this fancy cabinet full of china. Slick, ain't it?"

Her fingers curled in a soft clutch around her throat as if her breath came too fast.

"Jerry, it—it's just grand."

He marshaled her in all the pride of ownership.

"Look, butler's pantry, exposed plumbing."

"Oh! Oh!"

"Kitchen."

"Oh! Oh!"

"Here, Cloonan. I told you I was going to bring somebody out to take hold and sit on you and your bills, didn't I? This lady's coming out here tomorrow, bag and baggage. Hand over your account book to her and I bet she does better with it. See that you fix us up in honeymoon style, too. Bag and baggage we're coming. Savvy?"

The figure beside the ill-ket stove, bowl in lap and paring potatoes with the long fleshless hands of a bird, raised a still more fleshless face.

"Howdy!"

"Cloonan's been running this shebang for two years now, Peachy, and there ain't nothing much she can't learn you about my ways. They ain't hard. Look! Porcelain-lined sink. It's got Twenty-third street beat some, ain't it?"

"Yes, Jerry."

"Fix us a beefsteak supper, Cloonan, and lemme weigh them groceries I sent out and lemme see your books afterward. Come, Peachy, here, up these stairs. This is the second floor. Pretty neat, ain't it? Her and her mother shopped three more weeks on this oak bed-set. Some little move out here from Twenty-third street for a little rooming-house queen like you, eh? Neat little bedroom, eh, Peachy? Eh?"

His face was close to her and claret red with an expression she did not dare to face.

CHAPTER VI.

"And what's this next room here Jerry? Ain't it sweet and quiet-looking! Spare room? Ain't it pretty with them little white muslin curtains? Quit, quit, Jerry! You mustn't—you mustn't."

She broke from his embrace, confusion muddling her movements.

"Is this the—the spare room?"

"It is, now. It used to be the old woman's till I laid down on the mother-in-law game and squealed. Yeh, I used to have a little mother-in-law in our house that was some mother-in-law. Believe me, she makes that old devil of yours look like a prize angel."

"I— This'll be just the room for Dee Dee, Jerry, where she can feel the morning sun and hear the street cars over there when she gets lonesome. She ought to have the sunniest room, because it's something she can feel without seeing—poor thing. This will be a swell room for poor old blind Dee Dee, won't it, Jerry? Won't it, Jerry dear?"

"Cut the comedy, Peachy. There's a neat free ward waiting for her just the other direction from the city than Newton Heights. Cut the comedy, Peachy."

"Jerry, I—I gotta have her with me. I— Now that she—she's in the dark. She couldn't stand an institution, Jerry, she—she just couldn't."

"That's what they all say, but they get over it. I know a—"

"She couldn't, Jerry. She ain't had much in her life, but she's always had a roof over her head that wasn't charity, and she always said, Jerry, that she couldn't never stand a— an institution. She can take any other room you say, Jerry, Jerry, she just couldn't stand an institution!"

"You lemme take care of that. She don't need to know nothing about it. We'll tell her we're sending her for a visit to the country for a while. After the second day she'll be as snug as a bug in a rug. They're good to 'em in those places; good as gold."

"No, no, Jerry! No, no! I gotta have her with me! She raised me from a kid and—she couldn't stand it, Jerry! I gotta have her, I gotta! I want her!"

His mouth sagged down suddenly and on an oblique.

"Say, somebody must have given you a few lessons in nagging, yourself. Them's the lines she used to recite to me about her she-devil of a mother, too. Gad! she used to bang on her mother's apron-strings like she was tired."

"Jerry, I—"

"Come, Peachy, don't get me sore. Come, let's talk about tomorrow. We gotta get the license first and—"

"Jerry, I— Just a little yes is all I want—Jerry dear—just a little yes."

A frown gathered in a triple furrow on his brow.

"Now, kiddo, you got to cut that with me, and cut it quick. If there's two things I can't stand it's nagging and pouting. Cloonan can tell you what pouting can drive me to. I'll beat it out of that girl of mine before she's through with me, and I won't stand it from no one else. Now cut it, Peachy, that's a nice girl."

She stood palpitating beside the window, her eyes flashing to his face and fastening there.

"God! I—I wanna go."

"Where?"

Her glance flashed past him out of the window and across the patch of rear lawn. A street car bobbed across the country; she followed it with eager eyes.

"I wanna go."

He advanced, conciliatory. "Aw, now, Peachy, a row just the day before we are married! You don't want to start out making me train you just like you was a little kid. If you was a little girl I could beat your little ways out of you, but I wanna be on the level with you and show you how nice I can be. All the things I'm going to give you, all—"

"Quit, you! I wanna go! I wanna go!"

"You can go to h—l, for my part. I'm going to get a steak inside of me before we budge. Quit your fooling. See, you nearly got me sore there. Come, the car won't be back for us until six. Come, Peachy, come."

She was past him and panting down the stairs, out across the patch of rear lawn, and toward the hobbling street car, the streamer of ribbon at her throat flying backward over her shoulder.

In the bargain basement of the Titanic store the first day of the spring opening dragged to its close.

In careless similitude the bargain basement of the Titanic store resuscitated from its storerooms and from spring openings long gone by, dusty garlands of cotton May blossoms, festooning them between the great white supporting pillars of the basement and intertwining them.

Over the white goods counter and over Sunday as it were a paper-mache pergola of green latticework and more cotton-blossom May blossoms had sprung up as if the great god Wotan had built it with a word. Sadie Barnett's own mid-aisle bin had blossomed into a sacrificial sale of lawn remnants, and toward the close of the day her stock lay low, depleted.

Max Meltzer leaned out of his bower, and how muted his voice was if it came from an inner throat that only spoke when the heart bade it.

"Little one, them remnants went like hot cakes today, didn't they?"

"Hot cakes! Well, I guess. You'd have thought there was a mill-end sale on postage stamps."

"And if you don't look all tired out! If you just don't!"

The ready tears swam in his voice. "It's—it's been awful—me away from her all day like this. But anyways, I got news for her when I go home tonight about her five weeks' benefit money. Old Criggs was grand."

"They say the girls up in the ribbons been crying all day. She was no lovebird, but they say she wasn't bad underneath."

"God knows she wasn't. I got sore at her sometimes, but I—I know she was always there when I—I needed her, alrighty."

"Now, now, little girl, don't cry! You're all worn out."

She was always there when I—I needed her, alrighty."

"Now, now, little girl, don't cry! You're all worn out."

"She—she was always there to stand by me in—in a pinch."

"Honest, Miss Sadie, you look just like a pretty little ghost. What you need is some spring air, girlie, some spring air for a tonic. Wouldn't I just love to take you all by your little self down the river tonight on one of them new Coney boats, where we could be—right quiet. Say, wouldn't I?"

"No—no!"

"I wanna talk to you, Miss Sadie. Can't you guess? I wanna get you all by yourself and talk to you right in your little ear."

"Shh-h-h! You mustn't talk like that."

"That's the only way I have of trying to tell you how—how I feel, Miss Sadie—dearie."

"Shh-h-h!"

When I call you that it means—well, you know, dearie, you know. That's why I wanna take you tonight, dearie, all by your little self and—"

"No, no, Mr. Meltzer! I can't leave her alone like that. I promised I would never leave her alone in the dark if— if I could help it."

"Ain't I the dub? Sure you can't leave her. We gotta stick by her now, dearie, ain't we? Ain't we?"

A red seepage of blood surged across his face and under his hair. "We gotta stick by her, dearie."

All her senses swam, nor could she control the fluttering of her hands.

"Oh—Mr. Meltzer—Max!"

"What you and poor old Dee Dee need is some of this spring air. Gee! wouldn't I love to take you—and her—down the river tonight on one of them new Coney boats? Gee! would I? Just you and—her?"

THE END

A nickel isn't as good as a dime, but it goes to church more often.

One day last week a man understood what a train caller said.

After mixing business and pleasure business never looks the same.

Another society crook has been caught. Some people are not known by the company they keep.

You seldom see a fly going out through a hole in a screen.

Every family tree has some crooked branches.

No matter what happens, somebody always knew it would.

WATCH GERMAN ANARCHISTS

American Claims British Have 3000 Agents On Lookout.

New York, July 17.—Richard Cronin, who returned on the steamship Mauretania Friday, after lecturing abroad on American history, said that Britain had at least 3000 secret service operatives watching the work of te monarchists in Germany. From observations he thought Prince Eitel-Frederich would be the choice of the militarists. He also felt that Germany would suffer a revolution within the next three years and that the working men would come out on top.

Bernard Wortman, of London, arrived to interest Americans in a novel scheme of "sky advertising." An airplane flying several miles in the air writes letters 1000 feet high formed by a dense, heavy smoke. The scheme worked perfectly during trials at the Derby in England recently.

$100,000 FOR LUTHERAN CHURCH

Home And Foreign Missions Benefit By Will Of J. E. Cooper.

The board of home missions and church extension of the United Lutheran church in America will receive $50,000 under the will of the late J. E. Cooper, of Winchester, Virginia. It is understood also, that the foreign mission board will receive a like amount which will total $100,000 to be used as the two boards see fit to advance the work of the Lutheran Church. The estate is said to be worth $130,000.

Mr. Cooper was a retired merchant. He prepared himself for the Lutheran ministry while young, but was prevented from pursuing the course on account of his health.

Demas, the Deserter

By REV. J. R. SCHAFER

Director of Evening Classes, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—Demas hath forsaken me, having loved this present world.—II Tim. 4:10.

This is the shortest biography in the annals of men—yet the tragedy of a lifetime is pictured in these words. Demas, the deserter. What an exclamation! How base and vile. Of all men, he is the most despised.

Centuries ago the war of Christendom had just begun. Travelling worldwide, the great general of the cause recruited patriots to its standard in city, village and hamlet. He came into Colosse one day and gathered a crowd in the market place. He told the story of the awful conflict raging—he called for volunteers—and a fine specimen of Greek youth, educated in the fine arts of his renowned land, initiated into all its secrets of pleasure and enchantment, stepped out of the throng. He had been thrilled by the recital of brave deeds, crimsoned by sacrifice and suffering. The appeal of the heroic fired his soul; a burning desire was kindled to follow this great leader. He enlisted beneath the banner of the cross. He swore allegiance to the Christ of Calvary. He left home and kindred. He became a staff-officer to the great general of the Christian forces. For several years he shares the honors of war, the spoils of victory, until one day in a fierce conflict with the enemy the great Commander is taken prisoner and cast into a dungeon in Rome to await execution. This was too much for the gallant young captain. Disappointed, disconsolate, he deserted.

General Paul writes a letter to Colonel Timothy of his staff and tells him the sad news. What a tragedy! He has fought side by side with the greatest and grandest of soldiers. He has shared the triumphs of the cross from Antioch to Rome; then he deserted to the ranks of the enemy, forsaking Christ for the world. No wonder the heart of the apostle is almost broken. It seems we can hear the sob of his sorrow in these words:

How can we account for this desertion?

I. Demas Was Never a True Soldier.

A true soldier fights until peace is proclaimed or death rewards his faithfulness. He may lose courage at times when hard pressed, may doubt and falter; may even be defeated in battle, but he can never, never desert. Desertion is the proof of a superficial motive, the result of an attachment.

His heart, soul, will, life, have not been abandoned to the cause. The Apostle John has explained this experience. When referring to the multitude of disciples who deserted Jesus, he says: "If they had been of us, they would not have gone out from us."

Demas is always present in history of the church. Thousands under the spell of battle songs and enlistment appeals have professed allegiance to Christ. They have put on the uniform, taken their place in the ranks, perfected the drills, gone into battle, but when real testing came, they were reported missing.

II. Demas Reveals the Deception of the Human Heart.

It is possible to so closely resemble a Christian that only God can tell the difference. Wheat and tares look exactly alike until harvest. Soldiers wear the same uniform, fight under the same banner, follow the same commander until the crisis comes, then one sticks, the other deserts. Satan's campaign is one of deception. He seeks to deceive men and women with a form of godliness, lifeless and worthless. The more nearly the counterfeit resembles the genuine, the greater the deception. Hundreds of unconverted people have been deceived. A profession, a uniform, a dress parade, a battle have been the boast of discipleship, but their name is Demas, for when wounds, bloodshed and sacrifice came, they deserted.

III. Demas Shows the Subtle Attraction of the World.

Who can deny the fascination, the bewitchery of this world? Its sights charm like the mirage, its sounds enchant like siren voices, its fleeting treasures create a riot of passion, its pomp and pride intoxicate the soul. Demas loved the world; it was fatal. He never really opened his heart to the love of eternal things. "If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." Friendship with the world is enmity to God. To set the affection on things on the earth, is to deny heaven its rightful obligation. To follow the world's maxims and principles is to discount the Word of God and the guidance of His Spirit. To live for a good time in a doomed world where sinners are going the downward path to hell, is for Nero to fiddle while Rome burns, for the captain to dance while the Titanic sinks. God has called us not only to salvation, but out of the world. "Come ye out from among them and be ye separate."

Angels Unaware.

Be not forgetful to entertain strangers, for thereby some have entertained angels unaware. — Hebrews 13:2.

DOWELL HEADS LEAGUE

Dowell, of Chambersburg, continues to lead the Blue Ridge League in batting percentage with an average of .488, closely followed by his teammate, Satterlee, who is clouting at a .404 gait for 25 games.

During the past week Wilson added one more home run to his string, making a total of 17 for the 36 games in which he has played. He also leads in total bases with 112, with Goff, Hanover, in second place with 107.

Other league leaders are:
Two-base hits—Diehl, Hagerstown, 16.

Three-base hits—Brophy, Martinsburg, 5.

Stolen bases—Conti, Waynesboro, 20.

Sacrifice hits—Strain, Frederick, 19.

Runs scored—Gardner, Frederick, 40.

After hitting safely in 11 consecutive games, Brophy, Martinsburg, was stopped recently by Pitcher Stevens of Frederick.

Miller, Chambersburg, had registered one or more hits in 10 straight games until his streak was broken by his namesake, pitching for Hanover.

Satterlee, Chambersburg's, first sacker, is on a hitting rampage. He was stopped by Pitcher Witmer of Hagerstown on June 27, after he had hit in the last 10 games. Starting out again next day, he has hit in the last 10 games played. During this batting spree he has been to bat 78 times and registered 30 safe wallops for an average of .385.

YOUNG MEN SEEK MORE TRAINING

Military Camps Are Swamped With Applications For Summer Sessions.

Washington, D. C., July 17—Reports from the nine army corps areas show that young Americans are eager for military training, applications for admission to the summer civilian military training camps having swamped officials. In some areas applications are no longer being counted, the number received by June 30 showing that the quota would be far exceeded long before the camps open on August 1.

Indications are that more than 50,000 young men will seek admission to the camps this year. Of these only 27,000 can be accepted under appropriations made available by Congress. The War Department faces the necessity of sifting out the applicants in order that the most promising material may get the benefit of the curtailed training funds.

Early reports this month showed a total of more than 35,000 applications already in. Only two corps areas, the first and third, of which Pennsylvania is a part, were then below the 3000 limit allotted for training in each corps' series of camps.

The fourth corps area led, with 5365 applications received. Because of the great interest manifested in the Southern States, permission for an additional 300 men to be taken into the camps in that section has been granted.

Applicants Outnumber Quota

In the seventh corps area, the middle western section, 14,028 applications were on file early in July, against the 3000 limit to be taken into the camps. The ninth corps, the far west, 3400 had applied a month before the first camp opened. The possible scope of the civilian military training camp movement, as shown by this public interest, is being considered by War Department officials with a view to some future rearrangements to give the camps even closer connection with the reserve army machinery.

During the recent visit here of George Perry Graham, Canadian Defense Minister, he explained to American army officials that a similar system is followed in Canada, the students being known as cadets. Canada will furnish training this year for 100,000 cadets as compared to the 27,000 in the American civilian training camps, Graham said.

the end of the year much of the great force gathered by the late Commissioner Sadler will have been let go. Construction work now under way will use the last of the $50,000 bond issue authorized by the voters in 1918. Another bond issue is pending, but it must be passed by the next Legislature and then be ratified by the people. This year the department had under contract 600 miles of construction and last year 1000 miles. The work last year was put through, according to Acting Commissioner Biles, with a six per cent overhead.

MANY NEW SCHOOLS TO RISE

Harrisburg, July 17.—The filing of 502 plans for new school buildings with the Department of Public Instruction indicates one of the heaviest of such programs ever undertaken in the State, according to Superintendent Finegan. Expenditure of more than $20,000,000 is involved. There are 397 building plans on file which have not been definitely approved. Sixty of these involve standard plans and specifications which are furnished to the districts without cost by the department. Plans for 105 buildings have been approved.

Dr. Finegan estimates that the department in its supervisory capacity has saved the districts $704,013 in architectural fees and other costs. A great deal of this service has been rendered in the last two years. Twenty plans for new buildings were submitted on one day last month and on three days of that month the number of plans submitted aggregated 39, bringing the total for the month to 180. Cambria county is erecting 39 new schools this year, while in Luzerne and Lackawanna counties huge projects are under way.

In one western city a revision of plans reduced the estimated cost from $300,000 to $100,000 and provided additional facilities not given in the more costly plans. While the supervising service was started primarily to insure erection of buildings conforming to accepted standards of safety, illumination, heating, ventilation and pupil capacity, it has grown to include consulting architectural service and other functions. Standard sets of plans for various types of schools, from the one-room type to the larger buildings, have been prepared for the use of rural districts.

FINDS NEW INCOME SOURCE

Auditor General to Tax Many Non-Profit Making Corporations.

Harrisburg, July 17.—The thousands of corporations in Pennsylvania not organized for profit will be required to file reports for assessment of capital stock or loans taxes by the Auditor General where they have any capital stock, according to an opinion given Saturday by Deputy Attorney General Hull to Auditor General Lewis. Fiscal officials could not make any estimate of the number of corporations that would be affected, but said the number would run into thousands. Recently numerous agricultural co-operative associations have come into existence, being formed under acts of the last few Legislatures. They have capital stock, as have similar organizations with other objects. Some country clubs also are included.

Deputy Attorney General Hull holds that all corporations which have capital stock, excepting such as are created and operated for religious or charitable purposes, are required to make capital stock reports annually to the Auditor General and pay the capital stock tax. He also holds they are required to make annual reports of their loans and to assess, collect and pay into the State Treasury the State tax on these loans.

As to corporations of religious or charitable nature he says it has been the settled policy of the Commonwealth from its foundation not to tax property held for such objects. In regard to the others he holds the tax is not a tax upon gross earnings or receipts or income, but upon the corporate property. The fact that they are not organized for profit is held to be no reason why they should not bear a share of the burden of State taxation. Charitable and religious corporations, however, are not relieved from the provisions of the tax or loans.

Bug Does $72,500,000 Damage To Forests in Northwest

THE GREAT ENEMY OF THE WESTERN PINE FORESTS, THE PINE BEETLE, AND PICTURE SHOWING HIM IN HIS ACTUAL SIZE.

BY PHILIP J. SINNOTT

Klamath Falls, Ore., July 17—War to the death is being waged on the western pine beetle, which has done $72,500,000 damage to forests in the northwest in 10 years.

Federal and state governments are cooperating with private owners of timber lands in an extensive campaign.

They are spurred to every effort by fear that the beetle may spread from its present location and destroy the largest body of western pine in America.

Large stretches of the Black Hills forest in the Dakotas were swept entirely clear of western pine before control methods were devised.

Big Area Threatened

The threatened timber belt is estimated as one-sixth of the standing western pine on the earth's surface. It extends from central Oregon into central California.

Pine, one of the most used varieties of lumber, is becoming scarcer every year.

An area of 1,200,000 acres, containing 12 billion feet of fine timber, has been swept of ten per cent of its trees in the last ten years through the beetle's work.

If milled and converted into houses—using 15,000 feet for each house—this destroyed timber would have provided a total of 100,000 homes, habitations for half a million people.

How Beetles Attack

Attacking pine timber in swarms, the beetles bore into the tree and pierce its living bark before the tree can protect itself by exuding pitch. The females and larvae then bore galleries in the thin living bark. In this way, the tree is soon girdled. Like a person whose spine is severed, the tree soon begins to die.

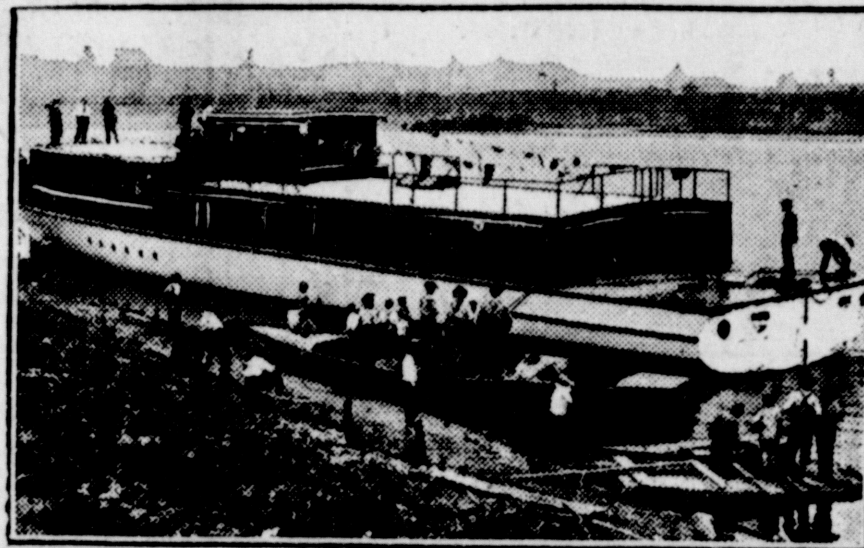

In less than three months' time, the eggs laid in the bark are hatched, developed, and the increased swarm flies on to attack other trees.

Traces of the beetles work have been found in California, Washington, Idaho, Montana, Colorado and New Mexico.

Skilled timbermen patrol thoroughly every part of infested areas, watching for trees that have been attacked.

A tree "spotted" as infested, it is marked for a cutting crew. This fells the tree, peels the bark from it, and by burning the bark, destroys the beetles.

a scientific combination of outer shirt and athletic drawers. You put it on just like an athletic unionsuit and after your trousers and belt are in place, you simply pull up the fullness of the shirt enough to allow full body freedom and your belt holds the garment permanently in place. The shirt can't pull out further to annoy you.
